Another Step Forward

Every course I finish feels like another building block in my programming journey — and this one was a bit different.

I just wrapped up the Programming with T-SQL course from DotNetWithElwakeel, scoring 38/39 (97%) — a result I genuinely worked hard for.

What stood out for me was how practical and to-the-point the course was, with no filler — every concept came with a real example that made it click, not just memorize.

A big part of that experience is thanks to Eng. Abdelrahman Shaaban and his teaching style. Next step? Putting all of this into real projects.
